COMMENT OF THE DAY

No Surprises

THE result of the Urban Council by-election could hardly be described as surprising. Mr Brook Bernacchi (Reform) has a large personal following and a long record as a politician in this Colony. Mr Allport is a virtual newcomer to this field but as he is one who has shown a keen interest in the affairs of the community it is to be hoped he is not disengaged by the outcome.

It is interesting, however, to compare Wednesday's voting with the full election figures in March wherein the Civic Association candidates polled heavily. Indeed Mr Li, Yiu-bor topped the poll on that occasion with 4,569 votes—600 votes more than Mr Bernacchi—and two other Civic candidates were elected with more than 3,600 votes each. Mr Allport on that occasion polled 3,270 votes against only 1,486 votes yesterday, and Mr Bernacchi's, 2,590.

It is therefore difficult to decide how much of yesterday's voting in favour of Mr Bernacchi was due to his personal following or to better mobilisation of party supporters. It would appear both factors played some part in his victory and that the Civic Association's "regular" following is less substantial though on the last election results its policies appear to be more appealing.

THE only other conclusion possible is that the apathetic attitude of the electorate—which is not surprising in view of the proximity of the two elections—was less damaging to Mr Bernacchi than to his opponent. If there is any conclusion for the Civic Association to draw from this it may be that it has a less highly developed political machine than the Reform Club—or perhaps less contact with its supporters than its rivals have.

That only 4,102 voters turned out—the electoral roll is 19,305—is disappointing but not surprising. The figure roughly conforms with the low totals recorded at other elections and allowance must be made for the fact that Wednesday's contest was a by-election.

Hongkong it seems will need a big political issue to awaken the public to its civic responsibilities—and under present circumstances and the limited scope available to elected members in the Urban Council this does not seem likely.

STASSEN TRIES PRIVATE DEAL

Western Allies Protest Over Action

By DEREK MARKS

London, June 13. A PRIVATE deal with Russia has been tried by Mr Harold Stassen, the United States representative at the disarmament talks here.

This is the conviction of London diplomats after a new dispute between America and her Western allies.

Speaking in Finland today, Russia's Mr Khrushchev said the Soviet Union would agree to inspection posts being set up in her territory, the United States, Britain and other countries if this would aid agreement on banning nuclear tests.

I am comparatively informed that this proposal was made several days ago by Russia's disarmament delegate in London, Mr Valerian Zorin, in private negotiations with Mr Stassen.

Britain, France, Canada and other powers at the talks protested.

TALKS TO RESUME

Mr Stassen is due to return to London from Washington for the resumption of the talks tomorrow.

Washington reports say Mr John Foster Dulles, the Secretary of State, has emphasised to Mr Stassen that future informal talks with Mr Zorin should not include "major problems."

The chief fear in London is that the row caused by Mr Stassen may have weakened the Western powers' negotiating authority.

China Mail special correspondent John Earle says the four Western members of the UN Sub-committee plan to meet privately tomorrow before the official session in the afternoon.

The Western meeting would aim at achieving a united attitude on the latest United States' disarmament proposals, which America's Western allies have been considering for a fortnight but have so far failed to approve.

THREE FEATURES

Mr Stassen's proposals have not been disclosed, but according to unconfirmed reports they contain the following features of a partial disarmament agreement:

★ 1. An immediate temporary ban on nuclear tests, linked to a "cut off date" after which fissile production for military purposes would cease.

★ 2. A 10 to 15 per cent cut in conventional arms and military expenditure.

London Bus Mows Down Queue

London, June 13. SIX people were killed and 12 injured, one seriously, when a double-decker bus mowed the pavement and hit a queue in London's busy Oxford Street today.

The bus swerved off the road at the height of the afternoon shopping rush. The driver said later that he had a blackout.

Four of those killed were men and two were women. One of the injured was in a critical condition but 11 others were released from hospital after treatment.

A witness said the bus suddenly mounted the curb and struck the wall of a bank, carrying several of the victims along underneath it.—Reuters.

POLL GOING AGAINST PREMIER

London, June 13.

The British public's views on Mr Harold Macmillan as Prime Minister are hardening. The number of "don't knows" has dropped from 18 to 13 per cent, according to the latest Daily Express poll of public opinion.

And most of the newly made up minds have gone against Mr Macmillan. But public support for the Tories remains fairly steady.

Fifty-five per cent said they were satisfied and 32 per cent were dissatisfied in the current poll. This compares to 64 and a half and 27 and a half per cent respectively in the May poll.

Asked if they were satisfied or not with Government's conduct of affairs in the current poll, 45 per cent said they were and 40 per cent said they were not. This compares to 64 and a half per cent and 45 per cent respectively in last month's poll.

Asked which party they would vote for if a general election were held immediately, 44 and a half per cent said they would vote Socialist.

These figures are unchanged since the last poll. —London Express Service.

In Saturday's Mail

Tomorrow the China Mail introduces two new Saturday features.

Michael Innes, the first of six authors to write for the China Mail Crime Club, starts the series with a complete short story—BLACKMAIL.

Alexander Thomson delves into the art of making money and tells how those who have it made it. For instance Vincent Jansen slept on the Embankment. Now he is running his 14th Rolls-Royce.

Among the other features will be:

★ Robert Koch, the biological detective.

★ A Friendly Owl by Thurlow Craig.

★ The Horrors of Lidice.

★ Men who see in the dark by Dominic Jones.

And, of course, Giles, Friedl, Logan Gourlay, Peter Buchan, and Thomas Wiseman will all be there for your weekend reading.

South Africa Increasing Duty On Hongkong Products

Cape Town, June 13. The South African Finance Minister, Mr Rom Naude, moving the second reading of the Customs Duty Amendment Bill in the Assembly today said the Bill introduced a form of customs duty which would give South African manufacturers of certain goods bigger protection against better quality articles from Western countries.

based on the value of certain articles imported by a duty based on the article itself.

For example, it was intended to levy a duty of nine shillings per garment in the case of raincoats.

To provide adequate protection for local manufacturers the high ad valorem duty that would have to be imposed would make the importation of relevant articles from Western countries virtually impossible.

But importation of these articles from the West was in the interests not only of South Africa but also the industries concerned.

Replace Duty

Mr Naude said it had therefore been decided to replace the duty

London, June 13. Thousands of sightseeing tourists thronged the fringes of Horse Guards Parade near Buckingham Palace here today to watch Queen Elizabeth, in scarlet tunic and tricorn hat, take the salute on horseback at the Trooping the Colour ceremony.

The centuries-old ceremony is now traditionally celebrated on the Sovereign's official birthday.

The Queen, sitting side-saddle on her new mount, "Imp," rode down the wide avenue of The Mall from Buckingham Palace. Her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, and uncle, the Duke of Gloucester, rode behind her, wearing the uniforms of the Welsh Guards and the Scots Guards.

Both are under indictment for the crime. Simone confessed she stood nude, in ballet slippers and black gloves, over the sleeping wife, and plunged a knife into her as she slept, the police said.

At a stormy scene today, Simone charged that the doctor had directed the crime and showed how to perform the killing after he had drugged the wife.

"I had nothing to do with it," Dr Evenou said. Weeping, he pleaded: "My wife was an admirable woman. I will never forgive the killer."—France-Press.

She is part of the Persian Gulf Squadron and her captain is Commander W. I. Campbell.—United Press & Reuter.

A skeleton crew from the Loch Alvie went aboard the tanker and the ship moved off toward Mina al Ah-Adi under escort by the frigate.

The owners of the tanker are the Singapore Navigation Company.

The Loch Alvie is a 1,575-ton vessel and carries two four-inch, six 40 millimetre and nine Bofors guns.

Major Louis Bertrand of the Fort Campbell Public Information Office, Kentucky, said 14 men were killed and nine injured.

Officers said the truck was taking the men back to their base when it crashed through a guard rail into shallow Piney Ford Creek.

A light cargo helicopter had to be used to lift one end of the truck off the bodies.—United Press.

GIRARD CASE

Washington, June 13. Chairman Thomas S. Gordon said today his House Foreign Affairs Committee will delay, if necessary, final action on President Eisenhower's foreign aid programme to investigate the Girard case.—United Press.

Graves Of Three Baby Girls Found On Castaway's Tiny Island

JAPAN TO STAND WITH WEST

Tokyo, June 13. The Prime Minister, Mr Nobusuke Kishi, said here today that he would tell President Eisenhower, during their forthcoming Washington talks, that Japan definitely stands in the Western camp and does not want to follow a neutralist or pro-Communist policy.

"The main purpose of my trip to Washington is to emphasize this policy of my government and the need for friendly relations between the people of Japan and the people of the United States," he said at a press conference.

The Premier said he would not take up the controversial Girard case as a specific problem. But he indicated that he would talk with President Eisenhower and the US Secretary of State, Mr John Foster Dulles, about possible revisions in the mutual security pact and the administrative agreement under which American troops are stationed in Japan.

FOUNDATION

"I hope my talks in the United States will lay the foundation for strengthening relations between Japan and the United States for the next ten years," he said.

Premier Kishi said Japan had not the intention of recognizing Communists China.

"But when it comes to trade," he said, "we feel trade should be increased."

He said Japan had no intention of shipping strategic items to Communist China and had no intention of following Britain's lead in "going it alone" in China trade affairs.

He said Japan favoured elimination of the "China differential" but "I believe unity is important to the free world and any action on this important matter should be a majority decision. We will not follow England's course." —United Press.

TROTSKY ASSASSIN LOSES APPEAL

Mexico City, June 13. Jacques Mornard, the assassin of exiled Russian revolutionary leader, Leon Trotsky, has lost his last chance to obtain his release from a Mexican prison before 1960, when he will have served all of his 20-year sentence, it was learned today.

Jacques Mornard, or Frank Jackson or Ramon Mercader, no positive identification could ever be made — has attempted during the last three years to obtain release after serving two-thirds of his sentence.

REJECTED

The Mexican prison authorities refused to release him, and a Mexican court yesterday rejected his appeal. The main fact against Mornard's release was that he entered Mexico illegally in 1940, several months before killing the former Soviet Commissar for War.

The Mexican court said that the early release of convicts was aimed at permitting the authorities to note their moral adjustment, but that this was impossible in Mornard's case.

Everything in the room was nearly stacked away on shelves; cutlery and cups lay on the table. The bedrooms in the wooden hut, which in layout resembled a large modern bungalow, were left neat and tidy except for thick layers of dust.

Entries in McCulloch's diary show that he paid his small band of employees £2 a week, but regularly imposed fines for any slight misdemeanour.

They included one shilling for missing church services and varying fines for lighting and other types of "loose behaviour."

No trace has been found of McCulloch's grave or skeleton. There also appeared to be no record of any women having lived on the island.

Malden, a coral atoll surrounded by treacherous reefs, is 400 miles south of Christmas Island. Five miles long and four and a half miles wide, it contains a large salt lagoon cut off from the sea.

The Find

The find was made by a party of Royal engineers after they made a difficult landing on the island last year from a heavily laden British army vessel.

In the hut, they found the diaries of Adam McCulloch stacked in a corner. These showed that he volunteered to go to the island after it was turned into a small coral mining post by a Mr Benjamin Nicholson, a British subject with business connections in Australia.

With a small number of South Sea Islanders, McCulloch set up a small coral-cutting mine. The output was collected each year by ship.

In a small graveyard were three tombstones, bearing only Christian names. One of the girls, according to the quite legible inscription on the corn reef, had apparently been drowned in the pounding surf of the corn reef.

100 Years

The engineers found that the hut, although apparently uninhabited for nearly 100 years, showed signs of its last occupant making a hurried and unexpected departure.

Everything in the room was neatly stacked away on shelves; cutlery and cups lay on the table.

The bedrooms in the wooden hut, which in layout resembled a large modern bungalow, were left neat and tidy except for thick layers of dust.

They included one shilling for missing church services and varying fines for lighting and other types of "loose behaviour."

Long Snouts

The "pig" found on the island and presumably taken there by McCulloch had extremely long snouts.

The only way the animals could get water was by burrowing their noses into the parched soil.

The wreck of a Japanese fishing trawler was found on the beach. It is believed to have been damaged by a torpedo during the last war and to have drifted on to the island's reefs.

After spending several months on the island, the Japanese left.

They may have managed to make one of McCulloch's old outrigger canoes seaworthy.

Destroyed

The hut and all the evidence of McCulloch's stay on Malden Island had to be destroyed by the Royal engineers to make way for the military preparations for "Operation Grapple" — the explosion of Britain's first hydrogen bomb last month.

His diaries and other records will return to Britain when the operation is completed later this year.

Experts will then try to solve the mystery of this volunteer "Robinson Crusoe" and his strange land. — China Mail Special.

ROCK 'N' ROLL BLARES OUT IN SOCHI

—and the joint nearly collapses

THE beach, at Sochi is narrow and pebbly and far from crowded. This afternoon in May—hot in the sun but cold in the sea—with the Russians laid out, plump and white as young seals, conditions were bordering on the idyllic. "Who are they?" I asked Nina, my official guide. For they showed all the signs of being a Nearly Smart Young Set. Lurid satin bras teamed with black trunks were almost a uniform and—more surprisingly—almost a Bikini.

The ordeal

"They are staying at the rest homes and sanatoria. Some of them are actors and actresses," she said.

Patient as fairies on beds of nails, they were stretched out on the pebbles—turning their buttery skins brown. The sea was more or less ignored.

I thought of my black one-piece bathing suit among all those pale plump maid-servants and let myself off the ordeal of joining them. Being stared at in shock is one thing. But being stared at in a bathing suit....

Anyway, there were the pebbles, Sochi, which is so filled with costly Corinthian columns; it is like a herd of white elephants, could have done with trading a couple of dozen of them for a swimming pool.

Depressing

"Come on, let's go shopping," I said to Nina—bored with the pebbles. But there was nothing to shop for I quickly found—except a white sheepskin hat with a sheepwool trimming (35 roubles).

The ugliness and costliness of Russian clothing is the most depressing aspect of the country.

The average wage is 200 roubles a week but a dress of cheescloth with weary roses on it and no style at all was 450 roubles. Deadbeat dresses at Dior prices, I thought to myself.

Men's shoes of best quality—which is rather like our worst—400 roubles. A platinum watch, a dizzy 5,425 roubles. Eggs were five roubles for ten. A man's shirt, 174 roubles.

"We must find a record-player for the rock 'n' roll player I've brought with me," I said to Nina.

Black market

In a sort of general store alongside such appealing sides souvenirs as a crudely carved marble owl for 105 roubles, we found a record-player.

I handed Mr Bill Haley to his first Sochi audience.

"Rock This Joint!" whammed out, and the joint nearly collapsed.

Jazz is fairly well known in Russia as there is a busy black market in discs made from tape recordings of overseas radio programmes. But this...

In fact the astonishment of the people in the shop could be easily excused as, the needle started jumping out of the groove and a more extraordinary din than even Mr Haley can produce was the result. Finally it was me that begged to have it taken off.

Nina, calm and gentle as usual, said, soothingly: "Well, at least, I've got some idea of what it sounds like now." And off we went, leaving the joint well and truly rocked.

We stayed overnight at Odessa and went next day to Kiev.

Here I inadvertently disgraced myself three times. First, by taking a picture of a beggar—a nice, bearded old boy with one leg whom I snapped taking a five-ruble note from an American tourist.

So charming

"There are no beggars in Russia," I was told categorically, when an angry crowd had borne me back to the hotel. It was no use arguing. I had, in fact, seen several beggars in Russia and been stopped by them.

Next I insisted on going into a delightful but very old market where the old women sell the produce they have patiently won from the little personal plots of land they are allowed to own on the immense acres of the collective farms. They

TO RUSSIA

sightsseer's extraordinary trip behind the Iron Curtain

were charming old girls, simple family after seven years in Canada and full of dignity.

But for some reason the rather priggish younger Russians are desperately ashamed of them. And when I bought some vivid little wooden toys that were the only bright and ingenious things I had seen in all my stay, I was told I ought to buy "something more typical of our culture."

This was my last night in Russia. Next day we flew to Moscow to pick up the airplane to Prague.

As Nina and I said, goodbye (and I was truly sad to say good-bye to her) there was so much I wanted to say. I had seen so much I hated but I regretted in many ways being such a turbulent tourist. I had seen so much that was lovable and wonderful in Russia too—and this was nearly always when I was doing what they didn't want me to do. I had made human contacts and felt human warmth, in spite of the Intourist barrier.

"American!" he roared at me furiously. I shook my head. "Deutsch?" he roared again even more furiously, for Kiev has not forgotten the Nazi "English," I said. "Ah, English. Good," he said, getting immediately much nicer.

Nevertheless, I was escorted by him and a bodyguard that increased to seven as we went along through a shanty town. Amused by the size of my squad, I started to drill them: "Left, right, left, right." At first this was funny, but gradually they began to smile.

We arrived at the police station all roaring with laughter and after a half-hour's hanging around I was rescued by a very stuffy young woman from Intourist who lectured me all the way back to the hotel.

Refused

That evening I dined with a Russian-born American who had travelled all the way to Kiev to visit his mother's grave outside the town, only to be refused permission to go there. He had grown rich in America but he was deeply attached to Russia. There were so many childhood places he wanted to visit but he was not allowed to move out of Kiev.

As we walked down the main street we gathered a small crowd round us. As he could speak Russian I was able to get closer to people through him than ever before. But there was one young Russian I didn't need a translator for. He had been brought back by his

I'm an egrazaphobist says Tallulah

by NANCY SPAIN

WHAT makes Tallulah Bankhead tick? I went along to the Ritz to find out.

How does it feel to come back to London, facing the town behind a pair of dark glasses? How is it done? Well, it's easy...

You hide behind a big word. You say: "I'm an egrazaphobist, that's me," and let The Legend do its work.

Miss Bankhead spelled out the word for me and I went home and looked it up in the Oxford Dictionary. I failed to find it. But Miss Bankhead says it means "a morbid terror of hard work."

That may be. Now, what's Miss Bankhead like? Well, for a start she can't sit still. She paces up and down like a racehorse or an elderly child of three.

She flings back her beige locks, she asks you to look at her eyelashes to see that they're still real. She wears a brown twin set and pearls (and for all I care sensible shoes) as though they were a Balmain creation.

And, of course, even although she is as dated as Michael Arlen's "Green Hat" she is about to be the smartest woman in town.

"You may call me Tallulah," said she. "And, I do, not lightly give permission for that, except, of course, to gallery girls and boys."

But to me she will always be Miss Bankhead. Everything this woman says and does is a contradiction, every time she opens her mouth she takes back the word she first thought of.

I'm sure she is very lovable, just like a dog that bites you is lovable.

"Don't you eat anything, ever?"

"Oh yes, I had breakfast on the plane. I had bacon and eggs and grapefruit, and toast and butter and marmalade. But I won't eat lunch now. YOU have lunch."

"No," I said.

Being Miss Bankhead, I thought, must be like being a long-playing gramophone record, eternally playing on a machine built for perpetual motion. I would not care to be Miss Bankhead at all.

"How do you keep going?" I asked. "What is the secret?"

She didn't know.

HER WIT

"I've had shingles, hepatitis, I smalpox, mumps, measles (oh, I nearly died with maoles), triple pneumonia, gastritis, ulcers, neuritis, and I've broken my hand and my ribs. Why, I've a steel pin in my hand right down. No, I feel nothing except when I get some moisture on it. Then it feels like chilblains. That's why I never shake hands now. Indeed, I can't bear to be touched

YOUR BIRTHDAY... By STELLA

FRIDAY, JUNE 14

BORN today, you are an individualist and will want to stand on your own feet without getting help or advice from anyone. You have a spiritual nature, although you may not be religious in the conventional sense. Your intuitions are keen, and at times you are psychic. If you learn to recognize this gift, you can turn it to good use very often, for you will be able to guide your actions to the best possible advantage.

You have a deep sense of responsibility for all those less fortunate than yourself and will want to help them in substantial fashion. Since you have a magnetic personality, you are able to inspire others. In any case for which you are working, you have a good head for business as well as the ability to turn a little into a lot during your lifetime. You men have a talent for politics and, without too much effort, can become statesmen on the national level.

You are not one, however, to

Boxing Matches At Baseball Games

Chicago, June 13. The Chicago White Sox and New York Yankees, fighting for first place in the American League, fought each other with bare fists at Comiskey Park today and five players were thrown out of the game.

Umpires ordered pitcher White Ford, second baseman Billy Martin and outfielder Eno Slaughter of the Yankees off the field. First baseman Walt Dropo and outfielder Larry Doby of the White Sox were also told to leave the game.

The Fins held up the rubber game of the Sox-Yankees three-game series for 20 minutes, both teams having won a game apiece in the series, and the Sox took the Yanks in the League standings by five games.

AT BROOKLYN

Brooklyn, June 13. Pitcher Don Daydale and shortstop Johnny Logan were ejected from today's Brooklyn-Milwaukee game following a fight which grew out of an alleged "dust off" pitch in the second inning.

The action, which wound up with all players of both teams streaming onto the field, started when Logan, Milwaukee shortstop, was struck on the back by one of Daydale's pitches.

Bill Logan had just hit his second consecutive homer to put the Braves in front 4-0.

Logan and Drysdale exchanged words when Logan reached first base and the two suddenly went for each other. Drysdale swung and missed with a wild right hand and Logan appeared to get several good punches.

NON-BONUS PLAYER

Philadelphia, June 13. The Philadelphia Phillies today announced the signing of Catcher Dick Leber, 21, Trenton, New Jersey, who just graduated from Muhlenberg College.

Leber signed as a non-bonus player will report on Saturday to Salt Lake City in the Pioneer League. The six-foot-four-inch, 225-pounder bats and throws right-handed.

Leber played for three years at Hamilton High School in Trenton and never hit below .400. — United Press.

Freddie Truman In Form Against Notts

London, June 13.

While Surrey's fast bowler Peter Loader was giving the England Test selectors a hint by taking five West Indies wickets at the Oval, Freddie Truman of Yorkshire showed he is unlikely to lose his place in England's opening attack.

Fiery Freddie grabbed five Nottinghamshire second innings wickets for 30 runs in 15.3 overs at Bradford and helped Yorkshire to win by eight wickets. Yorkshire also took two bonus points.

Nottinghamshire were all out for 135, leaving Yorkshire to get 97 runs for victory, which the northern county accomplished after claiming the extra half hour.

At Swansea, Glamorgan beat Somerset by nine wickets. Glamorgan 202 and 54 for one, Somerset 92 (Shepherd 40 for 20) and 221 (Alley 99). Glamorgan 12 points.

At Bradford, Yorkshire beat Nottinghamshire by eight wickets. Nottinghamshire 113 and 135 (Truman five for 30), Yorkshire 152 and 97 for two (Yorkshire 14 points).

BBC TELEVISION CENTRE TAKES SHAPE

THIS is a recent photograph showing progress on the main block of the British Broadcasting Corporation's Television Centre which is in course of construction on a 13-acre site in West London and is designed ultimately to concentrate the whole of the BBC Television Service under one roof.

The Scenery Block, from the root of which this general view was photographed, is already in use and houses some 500 offices, stores, and property stores,
workshops, carpenters' shops and the large painting galleries of the Design Department.

When completed, the Main Block will be in the form of a multi-storey "ring" structure of nine floors, enclosing a court of some 150 feet in diameter.

Control Room

In the "ring" there will be dressing rooms, wardrobe space and engineering areas on the lower floors, with offices above.
Radiating from it will be television production studios, telecine and telexrecording areas and a central control room.

The outer periphery of the studios will be enclosed by a continuous runway along which scenery and properties can be conveyed to the studios from the Scenery Block.

The area to be enclosed by the "ring" building and buildings radiating from it is 3 1/2 acres—an area nearly twice that covered by St Paul's Cathedral. Work on this stage of the project is expected to be completed by mid-1960.—BBC Photo.

Miss Searle also ordered them to be expelled.

At 6.50 a.m. on June 12, a police constable under instruction went to the Tel-O ferry terminal in Aberdeen to check on illegal entry at Central yesterday.

Both defendants said they came from Macao. They wanted to go back to Shanghai but a shipping company in Macao refused to take the responsibility and instead sent them to Hongkong.

ILLEGAL ENTRY

Shing Chun-wong, 42, and Ng Kit-long, 46, both of no fixed abode, were each fined $150 or four weeks by Miss B. K. Searle on a charge of illegal entry at Central yesterday.

TURNOAT'S WIFE ARRIVES

Tanya Dzurasova, 24-year-old White Russian, wife of a former American soldier turncoat, Samuel I. Hawkins, crossed the border into British Territories at Louv at 1 p.m. today.

Her first comment was: "I am anxious to go back to my husband." She added that she did not know when she was leaving for the United States.

Mrs Hawkins boarded the 2.22 p.m. train for town.

She said she was delayed by Chinese immigration officials for a short time before crossing the border.

The couple married in Peking in a Chinese civil ceremony
while Hawkins was in China, after deciding to remain there following his release from a POW camp in Korea.

Hawkins returned to the United States through Hongkong on February 27, six years after the ending of hostilities.

JOHN CLARKE'S CASEBOOK

Before The Wedding

THE girl Bob is to marry in a month's time must often have thought of her good luck in finding a young man as steady as he is. In an age when young men switch jobs on a whim—because of a foreman's scowl, or because of the colour of the canteen crockery, Bob is a model of steadiness.

After school he was apprenticed to a specialist branch of carpentry and he grew from boyhood into manhood with the same firm, becoming a promising craftsman in the process. He now earns £10 10s. a week, and this gives him money £2 10s. for his keep in their Kentish Town home.

TRANSFORMED
THE other day, during his luncheon break, Bob wandered into a West End store near to his place of work. Possibly his forthcoming marriage took him there. Perhaps he was looking round for things for his future home. If so, while he was doing that, he was suddenly transformed.

Instead of looking round the shop he gave all his attention to the bucket-bags that women shoppers carried, and every now and then he darted out a hand at one like any cut-throat or pickpocket.

Pretty Dreadful

HE was caught, and at first he denied it, pleading guilty to being a suspected person loitering with intent to steal from houses.

"When he was arrested," a policeman reported, "this man said: 'It's about time I pulled myself together.'"

Bob, a pleasant-looking, fair-haired man in his early 20s, braced himself, as if trying to do physically what he had said he must.

"There are no previous convictions," the policeman went on, "and he has £300 savings towards buying his own house."

Helpfully, Bob added, "I've never felt inclined that way before, I don't know why I did it."

"Well, you're liable to go to prison for three months," said Mr Frank Powell, the magistrate. "It's a pretty dreadful introduction to getting married, isn't it?"

Bob nodded. He was fined £10, and he went away shaking his head, like a man with a private mystery he despairs of unravelling.

Colony Cotton Mills Are Well Booked Up Cloth Orders Until September

AMERICAN SALES POLICY GAVE THE FILLIP

by A China Mail Reporter

Hongkong cotton mills are doing good business. Most mills have cloth orders booked up to September and October—some are booked up even farther ahead—and yarn orders are booked to the end of July.

This was learned reliably this morning.

The buoyant state of the industry is reflected in Stock Exchange quotations for cotton issues.

A cotton authority told the China Mail: "In most parts of the world the textile industry is extremely busy—there is practically a small boom."

Hongkong was sharing in this activity, he said.

This was a marked change compared with business activity in the early part of last year when, the cotton authority said, "we were driven to find orders."

Commenting on last year's slack period the cotton authority said: "It depended largely on the selling policy of cotton in the United States. Until textile concerns in all parts of the world had something stable to work on with American cotton policy there was a general hold-up. Nobody would buy or sell."

"Suddenly they came out with a new sales policy and that changed the whole situation."

FOREIGN EXCHANGE

Other factors behind the upswing in business were political and economic questions, the cotton authority said.

"It is largely a question of consuming countries having sufficient foreign exchange to meet orders. When they haven't got it they put on restrictive regulations and that makes it difficult."

Judge James Wicks at the Victoria District Court awarded judgment, with costs, to Surgeon-Cmdr Ronald Tipple, RN, in the sum of $1,275—the amount paid by plaintiff for the recording machine.

The defendants were Yee On Hong Co., Ltd., of Fu House. They were represented by Mr J. C. Wilman, of Johnson, Stokes and Master.

Mr M. E. Ives, of Peter Mo and Co., represented the plaintiff.

CLIMATIC FAULTS

Sitting with Judge Wicks as assessors were two technical experts, Flight Lieut Michael O'Hagan, RAF, and Mr Yui-kwong Luk.

The defendants were also ordered to pay the assessors' remuneration.

Surgeon-Cmdr Tipple claimed "damages for alleged breach of conditions of sale. He said at an earlier hearing that he bought a hi-fi recorder, which he later found to be unsuitable for reproducing records of a high quality.

The sound equipment company contended that the climatic faults of the machine had been explained to the plaintiff and that he must have bought the recorder with that knowledge.

CAT Apply For Seoul Service

Applications to the Licensing Authority by the Civil Air Transport Co., Ltd., for permission to operate two passenger, freight and mail air services between Seoul and Bangkok, via Hongkong, and between Hongkong and Seoul, via Taipeh, were published in the Government Gazette this morning.

CAT proposed two flights weekly in their Seoul to Bangkok route, with calls at Tokyo, Okinawa, Taipeh and Hongkong, and a weekly flight service in their Seoul-Taipeh-Hongkong service.

LABOUR PROBLEMS

"There is a very good example in Japan where they are increasing production facilities very quickly and now they cannot sell enough."

"In Hongkong the industry is in the whole extremely well managed by leaders who have a vast amount of energy and initiative, and who are very shrewd businessmen."

"But in view of the fact that many industries here are still developing the cream of the labour has been taken and now mills are finding it very difficult to get skilled labour. Supervisory and administrative staff are becoming increasingly difficult to obtain."

"There are various schemes being developed for training, the most important of which will be the new technical college which will have a textile section. The industry will help to organise it technically to meet the special requirements of the Colony."

PRISONER FOUND HANGING IN CELL

A prisoner was found hanging in his cell at Victoria Prison at 11:10 on Wednesday night and although every effort was made to revive him, he was dead on arrival at the Prison Medical Officer's surgery.

The prisoner was Law Woon alias Wong Yiu.

He was on remand on charges of assault with intent to rob and possession of arms and ammunition without a licence.

An inquest will be held.
